Report

I am writing to report the status of the project and the contributions being made by the team. It is evident that development is very sporadic going long periods of no progress. On the other hand, sporadically there are instances where the team is outputting many changes on integral parts of the project. It seems that most of our developers are comfortable with java as those are the files with the most changes occurring. Furthermore, most helpful commands were going through the list of commits by author, date, and which file was changed.
